- yes, or be boxed in
by the picture plane.
The necessity of creating pictorial space
that is capable of dissolving its own
perimeter and surface
is the problem
that modern painting was born with. No one helped lighten
this burden more than Caravaggio.

"The biggest change
was made by giving painting its own space. He (Caravvaggio) freed painting
from architecture and decoration, and pointed out what

painting's proper rela-tionship to patrons
- if both clerical and
private should be.
But most im-portant, he chastised the vain artists who
-ld have to think about themselves and their work; he made the studio a place of music and mystery,
a "cathedral of the self"
